A SCOUT'S WORK IN TIME OF WAR.

He Possesses All the Cunning of a
Sherlock Holmes and is the Eyes of a Country's Army.

In an army of half a million men you might find fifty first-class scouts. Good scouts are rarer than clever commanders, and are not to be produced by any known process of training. Experience is the only teacher.

The qualifications are so numerous that they are very rarely all in stock at the same time. A really good scout must have the powers of observation and deduction of a Sherlock Holmes, the tracking abilities of an Indian, the resourcefulness of the hunter, the cunning of the proverbial heathen Chinese, and an equal proportion of common sense, pluck and self reliance. And these are but a few. The others, as the advertisement of a concert said of the reciters, are too tedious to mention.

As an instance of the information that a military detective can gather by merely using his eyes, it may be said that he can tell by the marks made by horses' hoofs whether the animals were fresh or tired out, how long ago they passed, at what rate they were travelling, and whether they were carrying a load or not; and he will be able to follow the track over any ground. He can tell how many soldiers have passed, whether they were disciplined or undisciplined troops, if they have travelled far, and in what order they were marching.

Civilized man may have many advantages over the simple child of nature, but the savage is the scout par excellence. His senses are far more acute and he has something less fallible than reason to guide him—something that for want of a better term we call instinct.

Now to consider the duties of the scout in actual warfare. First, he probably goes out alone through country infested by the enemy with the full knowledge that if he is captured he will be shot. He travels miles away from all help knowing that his retreat may be cut off at any time, and, as a rule, has no means of obtaining a fresh supply of provisions until he gets back to camp.

He must swim rivers, climb mountains, wade through marshes, force his way through thick undergrowth or crawl from point to point over exposed ground, taking advantage of the slightest shelter that will screen him for a moment from the eyes of the enemy. Then when he discovers a camp or finds men concentrating towards a certain position, he must risk everything to get as close as possible to obtain the fullest information of their strength and resources.

Nothing must escape his notice—the flash of a bayonet in the sun may disclose the position of an army on a distant hill, or at night the tiny flash of a match may tell him that men are encamped not far away. An American scout in the Philippines recently scouting discovered the camp he was in search of in this way. One of the sentries was smoking, and the tiny flame as he lighted his pipe could be seen at a considerable distance through the clear night air.

Very often it may happen that a scout may be away for three or four days when he expected to be back in camp within twenty-four hours, so he must always carry enough food to sustain him in the event of being delayed. The army emergency rations are especially valuable for this sort of work, as a man can carry enough in his jacket pockets to support him, or at any rate to keep off starvation, for four days.

Meals, lunch and fresh oysters served at Drum's restaurant at all hours, day and night.

CITY IN GENERAL.

(From Thursday's Daily.)

Deputy Revenue Collector Buck of Farmington is in the city.

T. D. Hines is in the city looking after his interests politically.

Bob Sawyer was in the city to-day shaking hands with his friends.

Col. Dalton was the guest of the Prescott House while in this city.

There will be some valuable property sold at trustee's sale at the court house to-morrow.

Lunch stands seem to be a paying business in this city. We now have five on Main street.

Col. Dalton went out this morning and spent an hour or two with his old friend, Col. Thilenius.

WANTED—A German boy from 12 to 16 years old to learn trade. Apply to John T. Sackmann.

The city park was beautifully illuminated last night with Chinese lanterns and two are electric lights.

Many prominent Democrats occupied front seats in the court house last night and listened attentively to Col. Dick Dalton.

Henry A. Astholz celebrated his 60th birthday last night in royal style. He was the recipient of many presents from his friends and family.

Blucher Sperling, chairman of the Republican County Central Committee, was in the city last night. He came in with the Jackson Glee Club.

The blowing of steam whistles last night caused quite an excitement till our people learned that the whistling was for the Republican meeting and not for a fire.

Walter Kennedy, representing the Schwab Clothing Company, of St. Louis, is in the city paying his customer, David A. Glenn, a short visit.

Mr. Kennedy is well known in our city. He has been coming here for more than twenty years, and there is no traveling man on the road who has more or warmer friends than he.

Mr. Martin P. Donohoe and wife, of St. Louis, are on a short visit with Mr. and Mrs. David A. Glenn. Mr. Donohoe is a large stock holder in the firm of Hargadine, McKittick Dry Goods Co., so well and favorably known in Southeast Missouri.

Mr. Donohoe has the reputation of being one of the best domestic men in the west, having had the management of the staple dry goods department of Samuel C. Davis Dry Goods Co. for twenty-five years. It is very amusing to hear him relate some of his experience of early days when he went through the country on a mule's back to see his customers. Mr. Donohoe is a jolly good fellow, and we would be pleased to have him visit our city often.

A SMART HOUSE DESIGN.

No material makes as pretty a house dress as the new cashmeres which are so highly finished that they can scarcely be distinguished from the expensive cloths. The accompanying cut shows a smart design in pastel mauve with golden brown trimmings.

Fresh oysters served in any style desired, day or night at Drum's.

WINE OF CARDUI

Woman's Crowning Virtue.

BELTON, Mo., July 27.

For years I suffered terrible pains every month and my doctor told me I could not be cured except by an operation. I felt I could not submit to that and was so despondent I had given up all hopes of a cure. My husband insisted on my trying Wine of Cardui and at last thank God I did try it. Last month I did not have a pain, and did all my work, which I had not done in seven years.

MRS. MINNIE LITTLE.

Modesty is the crowning virtue of American women. It is the trait that all mankind admires. A modest woman is the most pleasing of all created things. Because of this becoming virtue thousands of women prefer to suffer untold miseries rather than confide their troubles to a physician, and to even think of submitting to an examination is revolting. They can't get their own consent to an operation. Wine of Cardui permits sensitive women to retain their modesty. With it they can cure "female troubles" in the quiet of their own rooms. If special treatment is required they can write to the Advisory Department of the Chattanooga Medicine Co., and their letters will be promptly answered by women trained in the cure of womanly weaknesses and irregularities. There should be no hesitation. Delayed treatment means a chronic condition. The longer postponed the harder to cure.
